EMPOWERING
THE STUDENT JOURNEY

First Year

Gale eBooks

I'm trying to break out of the habit of using wikipedia all the time. But so much new information is coming at me thick and fast I'm struggling to keep up. Having a library of Encyclopaedias I can trust, and can cite, has made this so much easier.

Gale General Onefile

I started reading The Economist, Financial Times and The Times without needing a subscription. I've been particularly reading about Black Lives Matter. The Economist has a great article on it.

Second Year

Gale Academic OneFile

When given an Essay topic, I use Topic finder to see different ways to approach the topic, and the content within Gale Academic OneFile to do my research.

Gale Literary Sources

I'm doing a module on the Harlem Renaissance, and the biographies of key figures within the scene in Gale Literary Sources are really helping ground my understanding of the time.

Third Year

Archives Unbound

My module on the Harlem Renaissance got me interested in the struggle for Civil Rights,in particular the role the Federal government played. So thats what I'm doing my dissertation on. The FBI Files on key civil rights figures are fascinating and I'm using them all the time.

Gale Primary Sources

The Library already has some Gale content, and it cross-searches with Gale Archives Unbound. Its fascinating seeing how British Newspapers are reacting to the events I'm studying for my dissertation.

Postgraduate

Archives Unbound

For my thesis, I'm really focusing on the Greensboro Massacre, and the federal response to it. The papers in Archives Unbound are the absolute backbone to this project, and I've saved so much time and money not needing to visit the original archive in America.

Gale Academic Onefile

Having used the platform for years, it was a real thrill to see an article I wrote come up in the search results!
